PRESIDENT WILSON STANDS FOR THE NATIONAL HONOR.

Positive advices from Washington yesterday confirm the report of a few days previous that President Wilson will stand unequivocally and squarely for vindication of the national honor on the Panama Canal tolls issue.

He will not even compromise on the Adams contingency resolution; he will give no Micawber hostages to the future; he will not palter with the possible exigencies of time and circumstances.

He will insist upon our keeping the letter of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty, in which we gave our solemn pledge that the canal should be "free and open to all nations on terms of entire equality" and that there should be "no discrimination against such nations in respect of the conditions or charges of traffic, or otherwise." He will, therefore, use every legitimate means and influence in his power to compass the repeal of the clause in the Panama Canal act, discriminating, as to tolls, in favor of American coastwise vessels passing through the canal—a discrimination based on a quibbling construction of plain English, and flagrantly violative of the letter and the spirit of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty.

In a word, President Wilson has thrown down to Congress the gauntlet, as champion of the nation's honor, good faith and self-respect.

This is as it should be. It is as we had expected, for it is in consonance with his consciousness of right and interpretation of the better sentiment of the people that have dictated his every presidential policy and act.

Washington advices also inform us that Senator O'Gorman will definitely accept the President's challenge. So be it. That was to have been expected, also, in view of the fact that Senator O'Gorman, as a member of a subcommittee on the national democratic platform, introduced into that declaration a ship subsidy commitment.

Considering the coastwise "commerce" the State that Senator O'Gorman represents has at stake, it is not surprising that he should defend his child from inattention, notwithstanding his repulsive to cardinal and historic Democratic doctrine, and is repudiated in a subsequent plank of the Baltimore deliberation.

But it will be surprising if Congress, upon sober second thought, and in the light of the world's judgment, sustained by the American conscience, fails to recognize that repeal of the discriminatory legislation affords the only way of redeeming our honor.

It will not only be surprising, but bitterly humiliating, if Congress does not line up with popular American opinion and with President Wilson on the issue, and refuse, he repeat, to render the blot upon the national escutcheon indelible. We have faith that the popular and legislative confidence in President Wilson that has carried him to victory on all other important issues, will serve him and the nation in good stead on this.

Congressman Littauer's personal declaration that even one day in jail would be fatal to his client, funny how many fill people violate the law.

In arguing that war can never be abolished the New York Sun says that "man is a fighting animal; how can his nature be changed?" Evidently, the Sun does not believe in the theory of evolution.

Villa now thinks President Wilson "a great man"; but correspondents report no change in Huerta's sentiments.

Some State Senators are dry whether they vote that way or not.

New York's "alien insane" have cost the State $25,000,000 in ten years, Harry Thaw promises to make the record of the domestic insane just as good.

Philadelphia North American has two column editorial headed "Two Cents Worth of Logic." That might be called cheap logic.

Sometimes a widow does not get a third of her husband's property because the wife got it all.

President Taft admits that the free toll provision of the Panama Canal bill was passed by Congress and signed by him with the idea in view of providing a subsidy. An admission which makes the case of the advocates of free tolls no stronger.

Not a few New York politicians are beginning to wish that they had reformed conditions in Sing Sing prison.

Giving arms to the rebels will put the Federals in greater need of legs.

According to the scientists, orange trees will bear fruit until they reach their 150th year, but you can't convince some people that lemon trees are not on the job forever.

"Butch" McDevitt disproves the saying that the difference between a genius and a lunatic is that the State takes care of the lunatic. The State doesn't take care of Butch.

A THREEFOLD GOOD.

A product of experience in the bill presented in the General Assembly by Delegate John T. Lewis, of Mecklenburg County. The experience is one common to many delegates in the House, to the friends of many more, and to some of the constituents of all from rural districts. This is the bill which might be entitled an act to protect human life, game and poultry, and to make possible sheep growing in Virginia, but whose official title is "A bill to prohibit the running at large of dogs, and to provide a penalty for the violation thereof."

Three evils result from the lack of laws in Virginia prohibiting dogs from roaming at will throughout the rural districts, all of which are pointed out in the various communications on the subject received by The Times-Dispatch.

People are subjected to the menace of rabies; game birds and poultry are destroyed; sheep raising as an industry is rendered almost impossible.

The first is patent to all and need not be discussed. People from rural districts and their representatives in the General Assembly know the losses suffered by those who seek to raise poultry on their farms, and they, as well as hunters from the city, know that roaming dogs do incalculable harm in devouring the eggs and the young fall birds. People living in those sections in which sheep raising would be extremely profitable—the most profitable possible investment—and their representatives in the General Assembly know that sheep-killing dogs have placed a ban upon the industry. With dogs roaming the countryside, few farmers care to invest their money in sheep, and those who have tried it have given up in despair. To the dogs, whom the law, under the provisions of the Lewis bill, could keep confined, are due the decline and the practical ruin of the industry in this State.

Reduction of the number of cases of rabies; the protection of poultry and game; the increase in the number of sheep raised in the State—surely here are three ends whose consummation is most devoutly to be wished. The passage of the Lewis bill will be a long stride in the direction of that consummation.

TREAD CAREFULLY.

The House of Delegates acted wisely yesterday in refusing to take precipitate action on the resolution of D. L. Toney calling for an investigation of the management of the Soldiers' Home. After voting against referring the resolution to the Appropriation Committee, the House listened to those members who urged it to take counsel of consideration and discussion before acting, and voted to pass the resolution by which it was to-day.

Mr. Toney wished a committee named to investigate the expenditure of funds of the Soldiers' Home, an expenditure covering, as a correspondent points out this morning, a long period. Mr. Toney brought no charges. He gave no other reason for his resolution than a vaguely-formed and vaguely-expressed fear on his part that the funds of the home have not been wisely expended. Hasty action by the House would have created the impression that its members shared in that fear. Any action, hasty or well considered, would convey that same fear to the public mind, whatever the result of the investigation may be. Ten men read the news that the investigation was ordered to the one man who reads the evidence proving that there was no ground for suspicion.

Accordingly, The Times-Dispatch urges the members of the House of Delegates to debate the question calmly and deliberately with themselves before taking action. They gave themselves the opportunity to do this when they voted yesterday to pass the resolution by. Now let them take advantage of that opportunity. Let them be certain that they will not recast upon the management unjust reflections, which no amount of evidence and no favorable report, however strong, could completely dissipate. The very introduction of the resolution has done harm. Unless it appear exceedingly likely that some great good can come of it, let no further injury be done to men who are serving a charitable cause without pay.
